Homepage of BICC—Library online now

The publicly accessible reference library at BICC has recently established its own homepage, which is accessible via http://library.bicc.de or via BICC’s homepage. Through this website, visitors can search for books, yearbooks, grey literature and journals online in BICC’s library. It also offers information on the library itself as well as its opening hours, location and contact details.

“BICC nationally and internationally works together with various academic and research institutions as well as universities. The user-optimized website of our public reference library is another practical contribution to strengthening this network and to making research results easily accessible to a broader public,” Peter J. Croll, Director BICC, underlines.

In line with BICC’s programs, the library stocks books, grey literature and journals on:

- peace and development,
- arms/ small arms control,
- natural resources and conflict,
- migration and security,
- base conversion.

BICC’s library is member of the German Information Network International Relations and Area Studies (FIV-IBLK), a cooperation of academic libraries and documentation centers of twelve leading independent German research institutes working in the fields of foreign and security policy, and development policy.

How does it work?

With a special link, users will gain access to the online search mask through which they can look for literature in BICC’s library. As this research is possible online, you can obtain an overview of which literature is available in BICC’s library before you come and visit us. Opening hours are Mondays to Thursdays 9:00 – 16:00 hrs, Fridays 9:00 – 15:00 hrs.

There is one workstation in the BICC library which can be used for literary research. Copies from books and journals can be made at a small fee of €0.05 per page.
